Quinn wins Porter Cup on final hole

1971 Porter Cup Champion Ronnie Quinn gets an assist with his green jacket from 1970 Champ Howard Twitty

In a field dominated by youth, "old-timer" Cameron Quinn out-pressed the youngsters in a race to the wire, finishing a lone stroke up on four hot-shots barking at his heels in one of the most wide open competitions ever.

Despite a final-round bogey at the well-bunkered, 18th hole, the 39-year-old Rhode Island native held off Allen Miller, whose birdie attempt at the last fell short, preserving the 1-shot victory.

Danny Edwards posted a tournament best 65 in the final round, lifting him into a 4-way tie for second with Miller, Jay Sigel and Jeff Alpert.

CHIP SHOT... Six weeks prior to his appearance at the 1971 Porter Cup, Jim Simons nearly won the US Open as an amateur. At the youthful age of 21, he shot a third-round 65 to take a 2-shot lead after 54 holes. However, he double-bogeyed his 72nd hole to post a final round 76, finishing tied for fifth, three strokes behind winner Lee Trevino.
